For clarity, we use cookies, pixel tags, and local objects (collectively referred to in this notice as “Cookies”). We desire to use Cookies to help improve your experience on our Website, and to provide you with services and products that are relevant and important to you. We do not use Cookies to directly identify you, or to attempt to track you on an individualized basis. Any analytics that Holley uses is on an aggregate and de-identified basis.

What are Cookies?

Cookies are small data files that are placed on your computer or mobile device when you visit the Website. Cookies are widely used in order to make websites work or to work more efficiently, as well as provide reporting and analytics information.

Cookies set by the Website are called “first-party cookies.” Cookies set by parties other than the Website are called “third-party cookies.” Third-party cookies enable third-party features or functionality to be provided on or through the Website (e.g., advertising, analytics, etc.).

What are the types of Cookies?

- Strictly Necessary Cookies are essential in order to enable you to move around the Website. These are temporary Cookies that last only as long as your web browser or application is open, and are used for technical purposes such as enabling better navigation on the online service. Without these Cookies, services you have asked for cannot be provided. Once you close your browser, the Cookie disappears.
- Performance Cookies are stored on your device for longer periods and are used for various performance purposes including tracking the number of visitors to the online service and information such as the number of views a page gets, how much time a user spends on a page, and other pertinent web statistics. Information here is stored in aggregate form or on a de-identified basis. These Cookies are used exclusively to improve the performance of the Website and its online services, and the user experience.
- Functional Cookies enable the Website to save information which has already been entered (such as user names, language choices, and your location), so that it can offer you improved and more personalized functions. This can also help speed up your interactions with the Website and improve your Website experience. Functional Cookies are also used to enable features you request, such as playing videos.
- Analytics Cookies are used with our web analytics services from third parties. These services use Cookies that operate using information such as IP address, device ID, browser information, geolocation, content viewed, or other similar information for the purpose of analyzing and measuring how visitors use the online services and specific functions and features. The information use and privacy practices of such third parties are described in that third party’s privacy policies and Cookies notices, not this Cookies Notice.

These Cookies are also used to obtain insights when you have interacted with our online advertisements. Data for advertising or marketing purposes includes information such as IP address, browser type, general location (municipality, not home or street address), date and time of visit, domain type, and activity on the online service. We use and share data from these Cookies with our advertising and marketing partners that enable us to present you with advertising on other sites, or with marketing information, based on your previous interaction with our online service. These Cookies also limit the frequency with which an advertisement appears and measure the effectiveness of advertising campaigns by determining whether you have visited an advertised webpage or our online service. We may permit selected marketing partners to match and identify you using this information.

- We also place Cookies of third parties that track your interactions with our Website and that third party's website, content, advertisements, website links, and/or other online services. Third-party Cookies are managed by third-party service providers that also provide us with statistical or analytical information and help us provide you with advertisements that we believe would be relevant for you. The information use and privacy practices of such third parties are described in that third party's privacy policies and Cookies notices, not this Cookies Notice.

Why does the Website use cookies?

The Website uses first- and third-party Cookies for several reasons. As described above, some Cookies are required for technical reasons in order for the Website to operate. Essential cookies are strictly necessary to provide you with services available through the Website and to use some of its features, such as access to your account. Other cookies, such as performance and functionality cookies, are used to enhance the performance and functionality of the Website but are non-essential to their use. However, without these cookies, certain functionality may become unavailable.

We desire to use Cookies to help improve your experience on our Website, and to provide you with services and products that are relevant and important to you. We do not use Cookies to directly identify you, or to attempt to track you on an individualized basis. Any analytics that Holley uses is on an aggregate and de-identified basis.
